

Arthava veda says the wife and husband are equal parts of the same substance.

Adhangani – one half of her husband (better half).

Sahadharmani, an associate in the fulfillment of human and divine goals

Sahakarmai – a part to all her husband's actions

Sahayogini – a cooperater in all of her husband's actions

Women were designed to find fulfillment and identity in their husband and family. They are fulfilled by giving and receiving love. She is an incubator of love. She helps other's thrive. She nurtures and makes things grow.

Man gives direction, purpose and security.

Chandragupta only trusted woman for his personal safety

Women joined armies in ancient India.

Rather than creating loving environment they become aggressive and self seeking and they need someone else to create a loving environment for them.
